reStove
Enactus München

About Us

In India, most people in rural areas are still cooking with firewood using open stoves right inside their homes. This causes severe indoor air pollution drastically shortening the life of people and resulting in more than 1 million deaths per year. At reStove, we aim to tackle this problem by developing a small-scale and affordable domestic biogas plant for families in rural India. The plant is operated with cow dung, food waste and water and produces ready for use biogas.

As part of Enactus Munich, we aim to target the problem of indoor air pollution with an entrepreneurial approach. We recognize that most social projects are limited in generating lasting impact as their progress depends on additional means of support for their whole lifetime. Instead, we strive to help and empower people by establishing a local social start-up with a sustainable business model. Our vision is to harness the power of entrepreneurship enabling initial investment to generate sustainable and scalable impact.

Your Mission

- Coordination and communication with the NGO in India on a regular basis.
- Aiding in the research study to be conducted with the target group in rural India.
